

Which makes you more uncomfortable: being left alone or making small talk with strangers?

Being left alone.

Making small talk.

Would you rather be somewhat skilled in many areas, or extremely skilled in one area?

Somewhat skilled, a Renaissance person.

Extremely skilled, a masterful expert.

Which is more important: your reputation or your identity?

My reputation informs part of my identity.

My identity doesn't depend on what people think of me.

extravert

introvert

Do you spend more time enjoying the present or discussing the future?

Enjoying
the present,
here and now.

Discussing
the future and
its possibilities.

Are you a pro at following instructions, or do you try to put your own spin on things?

I follow
instructions
like a pro.
Success is important.

I put my own
spin on things.
Originality is important.

Would you rather take a class in science or philosophy?

Science,
as long as
there are lab
experiments.

Philosophy,
as long as the
discussions are stimulating.

sensing

intuition

You see a friend's young son holding his elbow and crying. What's the first thing you ask?

What happened?

Are you all right?

When choosing a piece of furniture, do you choose the one with better function or form?

Function.
It needs to satisfy a need or purpose.

Form.
How it looks and feels when I'm using it (or not using it).

Your head and your heart disagree. Which has the final say?

My head.
I'd rather be logical than sentimental.

My heart.
I pick what seems best for everyone.

thinking

feeling

When you plan a vacation, which is more important: the destination, or the journey?

The
destination.

The
journey.

Which do you value more: closure and stability or openness and flexibility?

Closure
and stability.

Openness
and
flexibility.

Would you rather organize a solution or observe the problem?

Organize a solution and get rid of the problem.

Observe the
problem,
determining
its cause and
effects.

judging

perceiving